worst professor ever. He does not like teaching.
He just reads PowerPoint slides. Does not explain code. AVOID him at all costs.

Lectures are straightforward and he gets information out in an easy to understand manner. I took this course when they experimented with the bi-weekly quiz format rather than the typical exam format and I gotta say the homeworks he gives before each quiz give you more than enough material to pass them with flying colors. He's very chill as well.

"Most Fall 2025 reviews are written by people who can't code in a 300 level course" - I have an A+. Masri is a decent lecturer but he's boring and not good at communicating exam logistics. His midterm was very technical, and the project he made was vague. The final took forever to grade, and there's no transparency with grading. Below average prof.

Most Fall 2025 reviews are written by people who can't code in a 300 level course. The professor knows his stuff and lectures well. The midterm was easy, with two basic coding questions (LL insert at head and Fibonacci), yet out of 100 students, about 1/3 submitted blank coding sections, another 1/3 wrote pseudocode, and only 8 wrote correct code

Basing him off his lectures (which he sporadically takes attendance for a 5% participation) and his midterm. he's a ok 310 professor. Class isn't hard even though the other sections with other professors had study guides and even allowed cheat sheets. He actively told us not to use them despite providing nothing of his own. He then blamed the midterm's horrible class average on ai. Even for the final he did not release any dedicated study material.

Not clear at all what content will be featured on midterm and final which are the only 2 tests. Class is graded on 4 projects and those 2 tests only. Professor often rants about students using AI and not wanting to code, yet doesn't seem like he even wants to teach us and refuses to provide practice study guides for tests even when asked.

Lectures are pretty awful and very boring. It's impossible to know what anything on the exam will even remotely consist of and he doesn't release a study guide or make the lectures interesting. He knows what he's talking about when it comes to software but he can't teach as well as he codes. Still better than Socrates and Destine so just go for it
